ParISIS, Anne Frank and Life Choices

The Email #6

November 20, 2015

Events last week were very sad. So this is kinda of an ISIS edition as we are all getting our PhD in ISIS.

A primer

If you are confused on what is the state in Syria, don't panic. It is OK. Things are pretty messed up. Here! Get this guide on untangling the overlapping conflicts in the Syrian War.

Also there is a very helpful piece from The Atlantic about what ISIS really wants.

With these two you can at least stop being very wrong while speaking things from the top of your head in conversations.

Getting away from the caliphate

The Paris attacks fell hard on the refuge problem. By many, there is the belief that the Islamic State wants you to hate refugees. While USA tries to not get any refugees, François Hollande said that"France will honor commitment to take in 30,000 refugees.".

on(the)line

Cutting deeper, ISIS is very successful on Social Media. We talk Kardashian style here. Here are the lonely efforts to counteract ISIS's mastery of social media. Also there is a hacker group fighting ISIS for a year already and they are not as controversial as Anonymous. Go figure.

Through Paris attacks people got wild again on social media. Facebook decided to enable it's safety check for Paris and gave people the ability to change their profile picture to match the French flag colors . That enabled them to complaint about the fact that Beirut bombings the previous week did not get the same publicity as Paris attacks. The question is Did the media ignore the Beirut bombings? Or did readers?

Finally it is worth mentioning that ISIS has a 24/7 Help Desk for terrorists.

Star Wars is comming

Moving to more general and as always not happy things, you won't live to see the final Star Wars movie. However if you drink a lot of coffee there is less risk of dying prematurely so you just might.

As we get closer to the Star Wars release, we will find more gems online. Here are some Star Wars characters reimagined as ancient Greek statues by French artist Travis Durden.

Also if you know an overly excited star wars fan, I guess this is a propper gift for Cristmass? :S

Anne Frank's dad a co-author of her diary?

You may have heard that copyright ruins everything. That is probably true. Right now, it s busy ruining Anne Frank's diary.

Life choices

NASA is hiring astronauts. Do you qualify?

Young women are living with Mom and Dad as if it's 1940. I get it. Moms cooks better.

As depression is a thing more than ever before, here is a story of a guy who chose not to die.